West Sacramento All-Stars win again

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

CHRIS SCHAFFER

Last week, the high-flying West Sacramento District 6 Little League champion 11-12 year-old All-Star team continued its undefeated post-season play by beating both District 7 champion Rancho Cordova, 5-0, and District 11 champion Auburn, 4-3.

In the shutout victory against Rancho Cordova, once again, West Sacramento's hard-throwing pitcher Chris Shaffer dominated opposing batters, scattering just three hits and not allowing a runner to cross home plate.

Shaffer contributed importantly to the offense, too, as did Caleb Grant and Ryan Ketterling. All three had key hits in the win, which qualified the team to continue playing in the all-important undefeated winner's bracket.

The game started off as a pitchers' duel, but as in previous West Sacramento victories, the team began to bunch hits together in the middle-innings and pulled away from their opponents. The game ended with first baseman (basewoman?) Katie Koell taking a throw from defensive standout Justin Lucas and applying a nifty tag on a Rancho Cordova runner as he tried unsuccessfully to reach first base.

New school open for business

■ School's PTA already has 50 members for student body of 432

By Daryl Fisher and Steve Marschke

SOUTHPORT ELEMENTARY SCHOOL: first such new school in WUSD since 1959

Officials on Saturday cut the ribbon to open the new Southport Elementary School on Linden Road. It was the first time West Sacramento opened a brand new elementary school since 1959.

Principal Diane Smith (formerly principal at Golden State Middle School) said the faculty, staff and students are pretty much ready to go for the first day of school next Monday.

"I currently have 432 students enrolled, and I wouldn't be surprised if there is a last minute rush of additional signups," said Smith. "Plus, we already have an active PTA (Parent Teacher Association) of about 50 members, and that's a very good sign of things to come."

Superintendent Dennis Kelleher of the Washington Unified School District said he was "ecstatic" both about the school and about how it was paid for.

"We're very fortunate we were able to build a school without any state funds. There are no facilities funds available from the state right now," Kelleher commented. "We spent $5.5 million dollars on this school. We had money from frugal business management, and from the sale of (unused) school sites. We were also able to get some money from the (city) redevelopment agency and borrow about $1.5 million for what I think is a beautiful facility."

The school -- the district's seventh elementary school -- is planned for "year round" scheduling, and will follow the voluntary policy most other district elementary schools follow of asking students to wear uniforms of white shirts and navy pants. The school will teach kindergarten through fifth grade this year, and after the district phases sixth graders out of the district's middle school next year, it will add sixth grade.

"I think what's special about this school is a wonderful technical computer lab," Kelleher commented. "Our other elementary schools have labs as well, but obviously they're not wired the same (due to the date they were installed). We have an outdoor performance theater here, and an indoor stage as well."

Also part of the school are a library with room for 20,000 books and internet hookups in all 18 classrooms. Landscaping work remains to be done in some play areas, and construction crews are still at work this week in front of the site at 2747 Linden Road.

Community members are invited to an open house on September 10 -- a date which will give students and teachers a chance to decorate classrooms with their work -- and families are attending orientation meetings this week scheduled by grade level. Most of Southport Elementary School's students are Southport residents who used to attend Westmore Oaks, and some are coming from Evergreen Elementary School. When it runs at full capacity on a year-round schedule, said Kelleher, the school will be able to handle 480 kids.

The last time Washington Unified School District built an elementary school was when it opened Alyce Norman School in 1959, but currently expected growth means the pace of school construction is also expected to increase. Kelleher believes that the district will need to build another elementary school in about four years, as part of the Newport Estates development east of Jefferson Blvd. and north of Linden Road.

"We would need more space in the Southport area if we have the building we're anticipating there," Kelleher stated.

Assistant superintendent Patrick Campbell said Washington Unified needs the capacity of the new school for a couple of reasons.

"The new elementary school in Southport fits into the district's long range plans in multiple ways," said Campbell. "It puts us ahead of the curve should residential growth in Southport come about quicker than expected; it eases some of the overcrowding in our other six elementary schools, and it will also make it easier to return our sixth graders from the middle school to the local elementary schools next year."

Controversial land site goes to Raley's

■ City transfers controversial site across from Money Store to Raley's family, while contributing $2 million towards its $31-per-square-foot purchase price

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

West Sacramento's redevelopment agency no longer owns the nearly-three acres of property across from the new Money Store building on the Sacramento Riverfront which brought it so much notoriety in 1997.

The land, which was forcibly acquired by the agency as a means of helping the Money Store project and spurring riverfront development, was at one time valued by a judge at $41 per square foot -- a figure to which city officials strenuously objected when they were ordered to compensate previous owners at that rate.

"There is not a single piece of property in West Sacramento which has ever sold for $41 per square foot," said Val Toppenberg, director of the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency. "Nothing has ever sold for $31 per square foot," he added, referring to the later price settled on by a different judge.

The property was acquired by the city under eminent domain law, which allows some public agencies to force the sale of land if it can be proved that the land is needed for the public good. If the seller cannot agree to the sale or on a price, the matter could -- as it did with the former Broderick Market site and its neighbors -- go to court.

The landowners involved (the Kwong family, Wentz Construction and others) obtained appraisals showing the land was worth several times the city's appraisals of $9 to $10 per square foot -- and used the city's own press releases touting the value of the Money Store building across the street in their arguments.

Ultimately, the city decided it would rather abandon the property action and let the property revert to its original owners rather than pay the higher prices, said Mayor Wes Beers.

But before doing so, the city made a deal with the Teel family trust, associated with the Raley's family which has interests in the area. The city would contribute $2 million it owed the trust previously for a Money Store-related land deal towards the purchase of about 2.9 acres of the property (owned by Wentz Construction and others) if Raley's agreed to pay the balance and take ownership of the property.

This would square the city in its previous $2 million obligation, let it off the hook for the property, and give the Raley's interests the real estate it wanted -- albeit at a total price to Raley's of $3.9 million, or $31 per square foot.

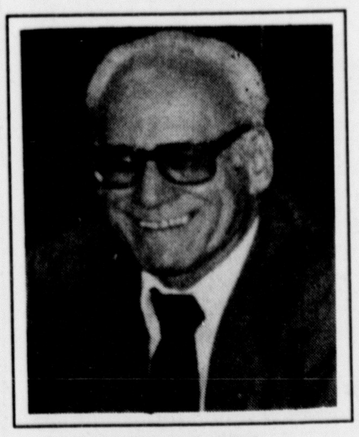

"We didn't pay any more than the $2 million we were already on the hook for," said Beers, speaking for the city.

Toppenberg said the property purchased will eventually become part of the region's riverfront mixed use development, which could include offices, residences, a hotel or other uses. Two parcels owned by the Kwong family along G Street were simply allowed to revert to the original owners.

About Town:

Ray Jones served city & school district –

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

RAY JONES

Ray Jones was born in Minnesota and really enjoyed the outdoor life of his youth, especially the skiing and tobogganing. After he got out of high school, he spent five years in the Air Force and then in the early 1950s, moved to California, married, and purchased one of the new homes being built in Elkhorn Village.

"I got a job at George Beale's market on D Street," recalled Ray, "and back then, people would still be out shopping at 10 or 11 o'clock at night. Everyone knew everyone else, there was no crime to speak of, and it was a really great time and place to begin raising a family."

In 1956, when regular mail delivery came to Broderick and Bryte, Ray decided to change professions and he became one of that area's first letter carriers. It wasn't long before he was a branch supervisor, then an assistant postmaster, and finally the postmaster.

"I walked the streets of Broderick and Bryte thousands of times," said Ray, "and in doing so, I got to meet the people and hear about their problems and concerns. What I learned in those early years turned out to be extremely helpful to me as I got more and more interested in local politics."

As the years rolled by, Ray found himself involved in more than just the political life of his community. He was also active in the Elkhorn Village Civic Club, the PTA, United Crusade, the East Yolo Planning Council, the East Yolo Friends of the Library, the Red Cross, People for

Has going to the grocery store ever traumatized you?

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

The other evening, I was lying on my sofa leisurely watching a San Francisco Giants baseball game when Barry Bonds struck out again with men in scoring position, ending yet another much anticipated scoring opportunity. The poor man (if you can call a multi-millionaire poor) just can't seem to get a big hit when it really counts. Anyway, as I called Barry a number of choice names underneath my breath and wished there was some way the Giants could trade him even-up to the St. Louis Cardinals for Mark McGwire, a series of commercials began to appear on the television set.

The first one seemed harmless enough -- it was about dietary fiber. But it wasn't long before a poor man suffering from what appeared to be a very severe case of diarrhea began unceremoniously racing up and down steep stadium stairs in an attempt to resolve the problem. And just when he was finally comfortable and back in his seat, the urge suddenly returned, and off he went again.

Commercial number two was even more disgusting. It featured another man who was squirming around in his seat, only this time he was a trapped member of a twelve-person jury of his peers being forced to listen to a lawyer go on and on about a legal matter, and his problem turned out to be an embarrassing case of anal itching. "Don't let your hemorrhoids put you in a situation like this," said the deep-voiced announcer, using words to that effect. "Make sure you use our product."

"This is unbelievable!" I cried out to my wife, who was seated at the dining room table writing the end of the month checks.

"Are the Giants losing again?" asked my wife indifferently, not even bothering to look over at me.

"Of course they're losing," I said, "but that's not the problem."

"What's the matter now?"

"You know," I said, "it's bad enough that I have to sit here and watch the Giants attempt to play major league baseball, but they also make you sit through a bunch of gross commercials, too."

"Just change the channel," suggested my wife matter-of-factly.

"But that won't help," I assured her. "These gross commercials are absolutely everywhere. And do you want to know what the worst ones of all are?"

"What?"

"The ones that talk about all these different kinds of feminine hygiene products, that's what."

"Now what's so upsetting about feminine hygiene products?" asked my wife. "Half the world's population use them, you know."

"Well," I hesitated, "I can't tell you."

"Why not?"

"Because."

"Because why?"

"Just because, okay?"

"That's not an answer."

"Well," I finally said, "if you have to know, I was once traumatized by a female hygiene product."

"What?" asked my wife, suddenly interested and smiling.

"It wasn't the least bit funny," I assured her.

"What happened?"

"Well," I tried to explain, "I'm sure you don't remember this, but years and years ago, when we were first married, you weren't feeling good one night and you asked me to go to the store for you."

"What's so traumatizing about that?"

"I asked you what you wanted me to get, and you said all you needed was Tampax. I told you I didn't know how to shop for that, but you made me go anyway."

"I don't remember any of this," said my wife.

"Well, it definitely happened," I insisted, "and when I got to the store, there were like 30 different kinds to choose from, with all different kinds of numbers on them and since I figured you were kind of normal, I grabbed a box that said regular on it, hid it under my coat, and hurried to the checkout stand. And that's where I got traumatized."

"What happened?" asked my wife, still smiling.

"Well, the line I was in had all kinds of people in it, and they all seemed to be looking at me, probably wondering why I was the only one standing there with nothing to buy. So I took the box of Tampax out from underneath my coat and then everyone really started staring at me. It seemed like forever before I finally got up to the checker, and then do you know what the idiot did?"

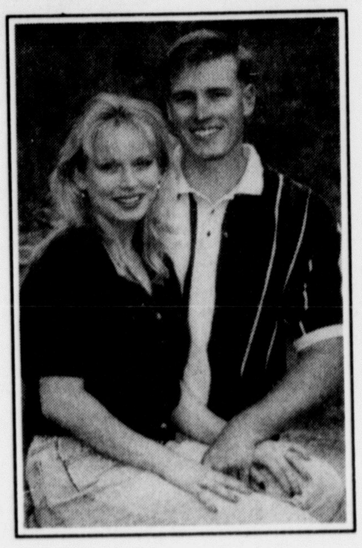

"What?"

"He couldn't find a price on the darn thing, so he asked me what it cost. `How in the world should I know?' I said. So he held it up closer to his eyes where everyone could see it and examined it really carefully, and then, when he still couldn't find a price, he stepped over to this big microphone, pushed the `on' button, and yelled, `Hey, Charlie, I need a price check on number three -- I've got a box of Tampax regular 40's with no price on it!'

"What did you do?" asked my wife, laughing.

"I grabbed the box, threw down a five dollar bill, said `Keep the change', and ran out of the store."

Don't you just love it - the NFL football season is just around the corner! The Dallas Cowboys play host to the Seattle Seahawks on Friday night, while on Saturday the Pittsburgh Steelers tangle with the Tampa Bay Bucs in the traditional "Hall of Fame" game season opener in Canton, Ohio. Then if you want a night cap of football action, the NFL champion Green Bay Packers will be playing in Tokyo, Japan (ESPN - 7 a.m.) against the Kansas City Chiefs. Are you ready for some football? The season opens Sept. 6th!

The 49ers opened their training camp at a new home this season. The 49ers moved from the Rocklin area into a brand new practice facility at College of Pacific in Stockton. The 49ers signed their number one pick R.W. McQuarters to a deal believed to average about $1 million per year over four years. Not bad for a young man who will be their backup cornerback and return kicks! The 49ers first pre-season game is next Sunday, August 2 at 1 p.m. against New England at 3 Com Park.

The Raiders training camp is going strong up in Napa, as they continue to work on improving their defense (ranked last in 1997) and search for a kicker to replace Cole Ford. Ford made only 13 of 22 field-goal attempts, giving him the worst accuracy percentage in the NFL. The Raiders first pre-season game is Saturday, August 8 in Dallas.

The Giants, who are trying to fight off a terrible slump, finally pulled the trigger on a couple of trades last week. The Giants added pitchers Jose Mesa and Alvin Morman to their overworked pitching staff and the Indians threw in utilityman Shawn Dunston. The Giants, looking to protect their clean-up hitter, also traded with the Orioles for power hitting right fielder Joe Carter in exchange for minor-league pitcher Darin Blood. The trading deadline is Friday, July 31.

A crowd of 8,798 at the Arco Arena Sunday night watched the Sacramento Knights lose a wild 5-4 game in overtime to Team Mexico. The Knights next home game is on Saturday, August 8th against Dallas. For ticket information call 928-3650. The Knights have a great family plan for $29.95 that includes four $10 tickets, a free large pizza and four drinks, plus a very nice Adidas soccer ball. It's the deal of the year!

West Sacramento's undefeated Willie Jorrin will headline the August 20th boxing show at the Arco Arena. Tickets are available at the Arco Box and priced at $20, $30, and $40.

game, pitcher Paul Holcomb turned in a great performance, baffling opposing hitters with his knuckleball. Caleb Grant had a two-run single to tie the game, and then Josiah Woods secured the victory with a dramatic two-run home run. Johnny Lopes also continued his fine post-season offensive and defensive play.

"These kids simply don't think they can lose," said Manager Mort Geivett. "From day one, all 14 of them have worked extremely hard in practice and it has really paid off. Fortunately, some of our wins have been by pretty good margins, and that has allowed me to give some of our non-starters an opportunity to get some playing time, and that is really important for team morale. It also helps to have a dominating pitcher like Chris Shaffer on the team. He's an extremely gifted athlete who can throw three quality pitches for strikes. He can be pretty intimidating when he's on the mound, and when you add in the fact that our kids hit the ball well and play solid defense, and its easy to understand why they're doing so well. They're making believers out of all of us and I can't tell you how proud I am of them."

Chris Shaffer, who tonight will take the mound once more for West Sacramento as it plays for the Section championship said, "Everybody on the team gets along real well and we just want to keep on winning. If we keep playing as a team, I think we can. The coaches and the fans have been great."

If West Sacramento wins the Section championship in Rocklin, it will then go to Foster City in the Bay Area to play for the Regional title.

Tonight's game will start at 7:00 p.m., a half-hour earlier than previous games.

It will be played at Twin Oaks Park in Rocklin, and for those who would like to attend, take the Rocklin Road exit off of Highway 80, go west on Rocklin Road to Pacific Street, turn left, then turn right on Sunset Boulevard, go approximately 3 miles, turn right on Park Drive, and Twin Oaks Park will be on the left.

News-Ledger Editorial

Why City Hall won't be across the street

In the past couple of years, a Buddhist monastery has quietly taken root in West Sacramento at a site long-timers remember as one of the most famous lodging and night spots in the Sacramento area: the former Hotel El Rancho. The monastery now blends in.

If all goes well, West Sacramento will put its first "permanent" city hall just across the street from this monastery. But there are those who believe that city hall could have easily gone to the other side of Merkley Ave., to the hotel site itself.

Several years ago, the El Rancho's finances were bleak and getting bleaker, and the hotel's owner, Robert Stahl, approached the city with an offer to sell. The city had already bought the Vacation Inn (a crime-magnet, officials said, which has since been razed and is now planned as the site of a senior citizens' complex). Why not buy the sprawling El Rancho and save its buildings, tennis courts, pool and recreation facilities by putting them to civic use?

The proposal seemed to meet with deaf ears, to the increasing frustration of Stahl and his employees at the hotel. The city passed on the negotiations, and the hotel was eventually sold to the Buddhists. It no longer remains on the tax rolls as a hotel.

One point about this whole affair perhaps was never made clear because the city council members at the time felt they couldn't discuss it. But the city had just lost a lawsuit brought by a legal firm representing residents at the Vacation Inn, who successfully argued that the city's actions deprived low-income people of "housing of last resort." The city feared that if it acquired the hotel, a similar lawsuit would leave the city responsible for replacing all the rooms of the former hotel with new low-income housing.

Not only that, but if the city even hinted that it would be interested in the property if some private party would just clear out all the hotel rooms first, the city could have been held legally held responsible for even the consequences of that "hint."

So nothing happened, and a promising piece of real estate went to use in a manner not consistent with the city's hopes for a thriving, commercial downtown. Low income housing was "saved" and City Hall will go across the street.

Although it may be in the best interests of the youngsters, the Washington Unified School District's policy beginning next year of teaching sixth grade at its elementary schools and not at its lone middle school will have at least one negative effect.

That "negative" effect is that it will relieve overcrowding at Golden State Middle School.

Of course, this is a "good" thing as well. But because of this relief, a large number of local families will no longer feel an immediate pressure to vote for the new school bond that would presumably build a new high school and move the district's middle school from Golden State to the larger campus which currently houses River City High School.

Because they no longer need the bond as badly, parents of sixth, seventh and eighth grade students will therefore be just that much less likely to vote for it. This may seem like a minor point, but even former school board members with views as disparate as Daryl Fisher and Hal Williams both agree that passing a school bond in West Sacramento right now is unlikely anyway. The district (which was scheduled to continue planning for a bond at last night's board meeting) doesn't need anything to come along to make that job harder if it tries again in 1999.

High schools are far more expensive than an elementary school such as the new Southport Elementary School. West Sacramento remains caught in a rut as it struggles to solve its high school facilities level, and moving the sixth graders (although a good idea) won't help it solve this problem.

Letters to the Editor

Fess up, Alma. . .

What a delightful article about a lady who has devoted so much of her life to the moral and educational advancement of the children of Yolo County (Alma Soost).

However, in addition to the undersigned, there are hundreds of former students who will attest to the fact that Alma, ruler in hand, attended all school dances and saw to it that a measure of adequate air space separated all dancing partners.

Own up to it, Alma, you were always a stickler for decorum among students and teachers alike. Would that there were more like you in the school system today.

Running for school board

I would like to introduce myself to the voters of West Sacramento. My name is Karl Machschefes. I am standing for election to the 2 year seat on the Washington Unified School District Board. This is the seat that was recently vacated by Hal Williams.

KARL MACHSCHEFES

West Sacramento has been my adopted home town since I moved here in 1987. I've been involved in various ways around the community serving on the Parks and Recreation Commission for Yolo County, and recently on the Long Range Facilities Task Force for W.U.S.D. My latest endeavor involved trying to reduce Kindergarten class sizes to 20 to 1.

I feel I am a well-qualified and rounded candidate for the school board. I spent 12 years in the construction industry as designer, estimator, project engineer and contract negotiator. These are valuable assets to our school board as W.U.S.D. gets ready to start a new phase of construction.

Currently our school board does not have any one who has children in the elementary schools though some have grand children. I feel the voice of the elementary parent is missing. I'm an elementary school teacher. This will give the board the voice of someone actively involved in education.

During the 1996-97 school year I worked at River City, Golden State and most of the elementary schools in our district. During this time I became familiar with the facilities in W.U.S.D., some of the wonderful staff at our schools and the great variety of programs we currently could expand.

I feel that my interest, experience and qualifications make me an ideal candidate for the W.U.S.D. School Board. I want to do the best job for the children of West Sacramento, they are our future and need the best we can give.

Senior Center, finally!

"Yes Virginia, there is a Santa Claus."

After waiting more than 10 years we are finally getting our Sr. Center.

The East Yolo Sr. Club has worked that many years and more, making clowns, Raggety Anns and Andys, quilting and pot holders, lap robes, slippers and many other things too many to mention. Yard sales and other events to save towards a Sr. Center.

They put their heart and soul into this project. Just think how many fingers bleed from pricking them with the needles they used in sewing.

As of today we have about $19,000 or more towards the new Sr. Center which includes 5,000 or more towards a quilt room in Virginia Ortiz's name and 8,000 for a fountain in the East Yolo Sr. Club name -- maybe this will answer someone remark it isn't very much for a quilt room. How can you put a price on all the hours, love and dreams these seniors worked toward for all seniors in our city.

If you stop by the temporary Sr. Center you will see a plaque on the wall stating the East Yolo Sr. Club has already donated a TV, VCR, piano, 2 computers, folding table and chairs, coffee urn, microwave oven, pool table, showcase, P.A. system, flag pole and flag for the use of the Srs. in our community.

It's a small start but a large amount of love and hope for our new Sr. Center.

Better Water, the March of Dimes, and the list goes on and on.

In 1963, Ray ran for his first public office and was elected to the Washington Unified School District Board of Trustees. He served 12 years on the Board of Education, six of them as its president.

"Back then," remembered Ray, "there would be 100 to 150 parents at the PTA meetings, and that's not counting all the teachers, who would attend also. Public education requires that kind of involvement and participation, and unfortunately, it's becoming the exception instead of the rule."

"Ray Jones was an excellent school board member," said Grace Ohlson, who served with Ray for a number of years and also worked with him on numerous community projects. "He was conscientious, open-minded, helpful, and a hard worker. He was determined to do a good job, and he did. He also played an important role in making the Turner Library what it is today. Due in large part to Ray's efforts, our library stays open many more hours than the average branch library in the state."

In June of 1986, Ray was elected to West Sacramento's first City Council, and a few years later, he proudly served as Mayor of West Sacramento.

"Those were exciting times," said Ray. "So many people had worked so hard to make the communities of Bryte, Broderick and West Sacramento into one city, and I felt very honored to be a member of the first City Council. Setting policy, putting everything on a sound financial footing, and establishing a good working relationship with the county were our first priorities, and I think we did a pretty good job in all those areas."

"I have nothing but warm feelings and good things to say about Ray Jones," said Mike McGowan, West Sacramento's first mayor. "In the early years of the city, Ray was often the bridge everyone used to get things done. His experience, friendly personality, and especially the historical perspective he brought to decision making was very helpful. He has made a tremendous contribution to this area in many, many ways."

In the early 1990s, Ray's health began to give him some problems. "They fixed a blocked heart artery," said Ray, "but what has really slowed me down the past few years is the emphysema I have. My lungs only have about 20 percent capacity now, and that makes it pretty hard to get out and do all the things I would like to do. I guess it's like that old saying -- I would have taken better care of myself if I had known I was going to live so long."

"Ray has been a good friend for more than 35 years," said Marino Pierucci, a longtime community activist who has witnessed much of the good work Ray has done on behalf of West Sacramento. "He's a very sincere man who is truly concerned about West Sacramento's future. He has a wonderful knowledge of the community and his input is always welcome. He wishes he could still be as active and involved as he always was, but the years catch up with all of us. What's important is that no matter what the task, Ray has always done an excellent job."

Ray and Ann, his wife of 46 years, have three children, a son, Ed, and two daughters, Kathy and Debbie. They also have 11 grandchildren, and 9 great-grandchildren.

"Grandkids are a great thing," said Ray, "and I really appreciate the time I get to spend with my family now. Living in West Sacramento has been good to me in so many ways and I have high hopes for its future. It has long been a dynamic community with lots of wonderful people in it. I've always had a need to participate, and I've tried to do my part to make things better. I've also tried to keep my word and get along with those who didn't always see things the way I did. Above all, I always tried to do what I thought was best for the people, because after all, what else is an elected official there for?"

Man beaten by youths is identified

Police have identified the victim of a serious beating early Sunday morning, July 19, in front of a Jefferson Blvd. business.

The hospitalized man is Eric Jordan, 27, a resident of West Sacramento. He is in critical but stable condition as of Monday, said Lt. David Farmer of the West Sacramento Police Department.

Two local male juveniles, age 15 and 17, have been arrested in connection with the attack. As of last week, police still had not been able to interview Jordan and a motive for the beating is unknown.

Farmer described the incident as an "unprovoked attack."

County agency holds classes for parenting

From Yolo Family Service Agency

Yolo Family Service Agency (YFSA) received a $3,000 grant from Target Stores for support of the YFSA parenting skills education program. YFSA is a nonprofit community-supported organization working to strengthen family life in Yolo County by providing a broad continuum of educational and professional counseling services to individuals and families.

Executive Director, Sally Snell, credits the continued partnership with Target Stores for the organization's plan to expand its capacity to support Yolo County parents in developing their child rearing skills. In addition to basic education on parenting, YFSA's parenting program focuses on a number of issues that can strain a family's ability to manage and function cohesively. Some examples of YFSA classes and support groups are:

Parenting for Yourself and Your Child, a class that helps parents learn about child development, building a child's self-esteem, setting limits and applying appropriate discipline.

Living With Your Teens, a component of the county-wide in-school counseling program for teenagers through Allied Services for Kids (ASK), a collaboration between YFSA and Suicide Prevention. Living With Your Teens promotes effective family communication, understanding parent-teen relationships and helps parents learn ways to reduce the stress their teenagers are experiencing.

Parenting After Separation or Divorce, a program designed to help parents learn to parent in this extremely stressful and difficult new environment. The course focuses on creating and living with custody and visitation agreements, the role parents assume in their children's lives after divorce and how to focus on the best interests of their children. This series also brings in family law attorneys to provide education about the legal processes that are available as alternatives to an adversarial approach.

Protecting Children from Conflict, a support group for children whose parents are involved in a high-conflict divorce. Counseling ins provided for both children and parents in order to mitigate the effect of the conflict on the children.

Workshops and support groups are available throughout the year. For more information call (530) 662-2211 or (530) 753-8674.

Your baby is beautiful. And may be the picture of health. But there's also a one in four chance he or she isn't up-to-date with immunizations. One in four.

Your child needs more than 12 shots over the course of five visits, before the age of two.

So never assume your baby is on schedule. Ask your doctor at every visit.

That way, you'll be certain you're giving your child a fair shot. And that's the most beautiful thing of all.

For more information, please call the National Immunization Information Hotline at 1-800-232-2522.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF DORIS MAE BOMBACH
CASE NUMBER: P98000181

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of Doris mae Bombach:

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Guy G. Gibson, Jr., in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Guy G. Gibson, Jr. be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on August 5, 1998, at 8:30 a.m. in Dept. 7, Superior Court of California, County of Yolo, 725 Court Street, Woodland 95695.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a "Request for Special Notice" (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A "Request for Special Notice" form is available from the court clerk.
